

LUMECON

CEDAR PRESS • LANDING PAGE REVIEW

Four front doors for Cedar Press.

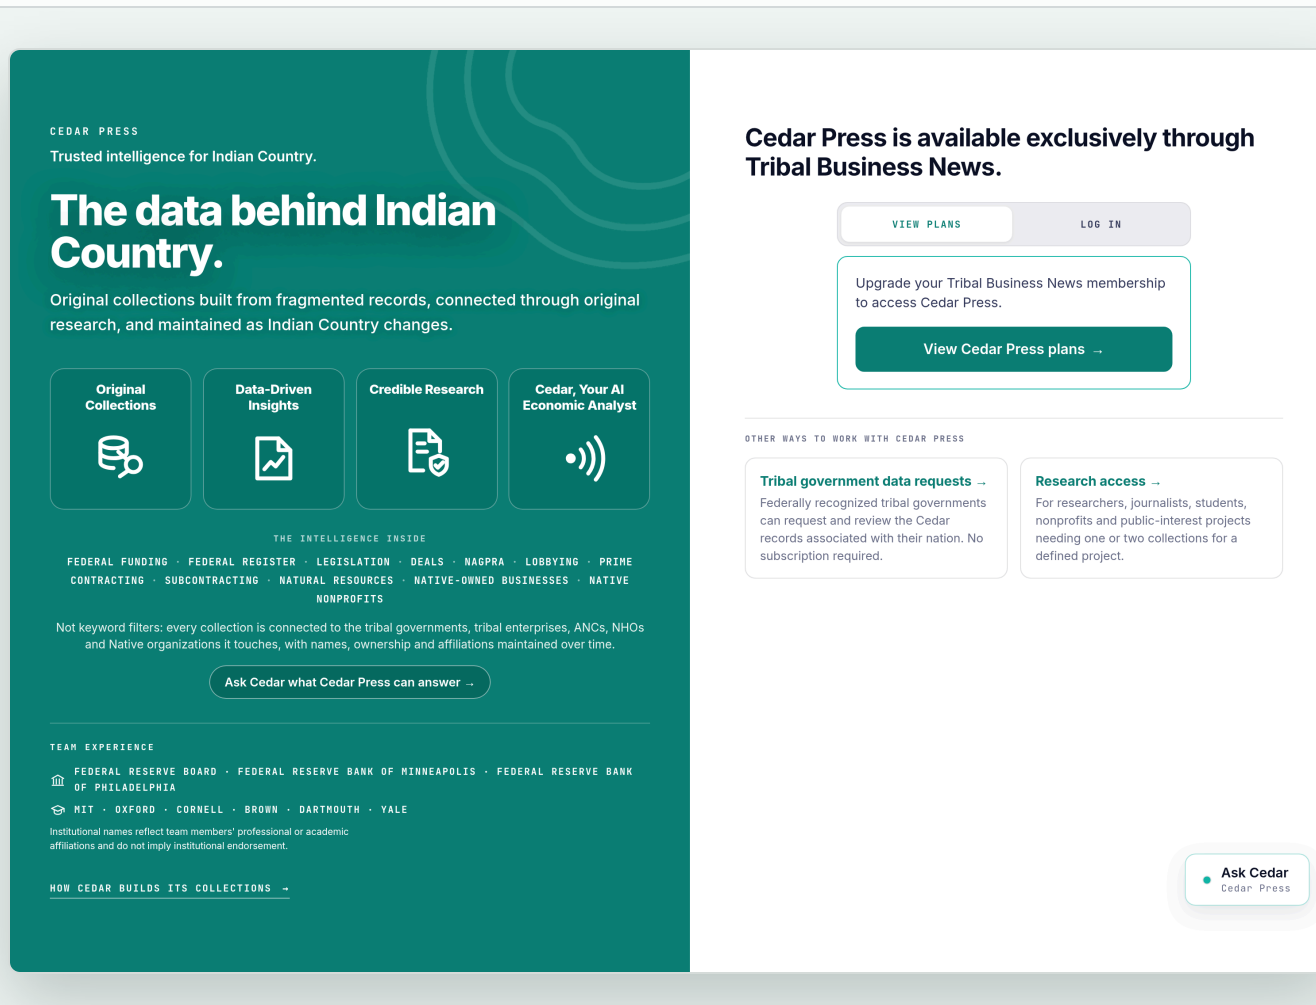

The current landing page, three animated directions meant to replace it, and a recommended direction that combines them. Every concept is a working animated page; each still carries its motion in the “what moves” line.

DRAFT FOR DISCUSSION • SEPTEMBER 2026 • CEDAR PRESS, BUILT BY LUMECON

WHERE IT IS TODAY

The current door

The live site as it stands, the full page. Four collections up front, the intelligence-inside list, both no-subscription paths (tribal data requests and research access), and the team-experience strip. A clean, proven layout, but the page describes the value rather than showing it. This is the baseline the three directions are trying to beat.

$176.7B

CONTRACTS TRACED, FY2000 ONWARD

$24.4B

FEDERAL SUBAWARDS

3.5M

ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS

2,386

DEALS TRACKED

8.5M

MAINTAINED RECORDS

DIRECTION A

The Ledger

THE DATA IS THE PAGE

Columns of real records, the Bowhead FY2023 contract, the Yurok forestry award, ONRR royalties and NAGPRA notices, drift slowly behind one enormous figure that cycles through the headline stats. A chip names each arrival (" +118 contract actions · just landed") and one row in the wall lights up as the record arriving. The feeling: standing at a window onto the ledger itself.

WHAT MOVES

The record wall drifts; the big figure rolls digit-by-digit every ~5s; arrival chips pulse in.

WHAT IT NEEDS

A curated “recent rows” feed per release, under the same publishable-rows discipline as the data samples.

THE RISK

The wall must stay quiet or it fights the figure; opacity tuning is most of the work.

DIRECTION B

The Constellation

RECOMMENDED

The product’s core claim is entity resolution, so the hero is the graph: hub nodes are nations and corporations, small nodes are businesses and records, and a pulse traveling down an edge is a record being connected. Each pulse writes a plain-language line into the side ticker (“BOWHEAD PROGRAM MGMT → Ukpeaġvik Iñupiat Corporation · FY2023 contract”) and flutters a stat. Nobody else can honestly make this page, because the connections are Cedar’s work.

WHAT MOVES

The constellation breathes; pulses fire down edges every ~2s; the ticker and stat flutters follow each pulse.

WHAT IT NEEDS

Nothing new to ship truthfully; a “recently resolved” feed makes it fully live.

THE RISK

Abstract: a skimming visitor may need the ticker to grasp what the graph is saying.

DIRECTION C

The Rising Curve

CHEAPEST TO MAKE FULLY REAL

The light, editorial one. A full-screen area chart sweeps FY2000 → today on load and the $176.7B rides the end of the curve, counting up as it draws. Supporting stats run as a band along the bottom; “LATEST RELEASE” pulses at the tip. The wow is time depth: twenty-five years, maintained. The curve shape here is illustrative; production draws the real fiscal-year series, which is the only data ask.

WHAT MOVES

The curve draws itself over ~2.5s with the figure counting up alongside; band stats flutter on releases.

WHAT IT NEEDS

One series: contracting dollars by fiscal year (additive firm-grain family).

THE RISK

Reads closest to a conventional fintech hero; distinctiveness rests on the copy and the sweep.

THE RECOMMENDED DIRECTION

The Connected Record

None of the three alternatives does every job alone. The Ledger best proves the data are real and current, The Constellation best shows what only Cedar can do, and The Rising Curve reads best and carries the most editorial credibility. The recommended page combines them.

Shell, from the Rising Curve

The light editorial layout and type, with the curve demoted to supporting proof rather than the thesis.

Center, from the Constellation

One labeled entity hub with three or four real record cards connecting into it: a contract, a funding award, a Federal Register action and an ownership record.

Freshness, from the Ledger

The release chip and source-and-date treatment on each arriving record, named to the batch release it came from.

THE HERO

Search a nation, enterprise or institution. See the record assemble.

Cedar Press connects contracts, funding, deals, federal actions, ownership and institutions across Indian Country, then keeps every connection current and traceable to its source.

EXPLORE A CONNECTED RECORDGET CEDAR PRESS THROUGH TRIBAL BUSINESS NEWS

Below the fold: the twelve collections with their shelves, the source and human-review methodology, then plans and the two no-subscription paths, tribal government data requests and research access. A compact stat and release band closes the page. This order answers, in sequence, what Cedar Press is, what a visitor can do, what makes it unique, why its evidence is trustworthy and how access works.